In Memory of John Milton Bryan.

In commemoration of the life and usefulness of an old comrade and fellow Confederate soldier, I turn to pay tribute to his memory.

The sad news of the death of Hon. John Milton Bryan has cast gloom over the State of Florida, and especially myself, one who knew and loved him well.

John Milton Bryan was a man among men; he was a man of high and honorable purpose, sterling worth and character, noble impulse, great determination, sunshiny in nature and cheerful and lovable in disposition, a kind and sympathetic friend, a courteous gentleman, as brave as Julius Caesar and as artless as a child of nature.

I knew John Milton Bryan well. He was as brave and courageous a soldier as ever fought in war. We fought together in the same command and under the same flag. We fought together during the Indian war from 1856 to '58 in this State when Florida was but a wilderness infested by Indians. We were then members of the United States mounted volunteers and endeavored, by main strength and with many privations to bear, to rid our Florida of a wild and treacherous foe.

Again, it was later on, in '61, during that terrible and trying civil war, we fought together in defense of our homes, in defense of our honor, in defense of all that was dear to our hearts; we fought as we saw the right in that "Lost Cause." John Milton Bryan and myself were then members of the same company, the Fifth Florida Battalion of Cavalry, commanded then by Captain J. D. Starke, and our regiment being then under command of Col. Geo. W. Scott of General Dickenson's Division. John Milton Bryan performed many deeds of valor during that memorable conflict, as well as during the Indian war in Florida.

I mourn with those who knew and loved him, and, as his family mourns, I bow in graceful submission to the will of the Omnipotent One who wills the coming and departure of us all.

The old Confederate soldiers are fast thinning in their ranks and low in the distance can be heard the sound of "taps," calling us one by one. There is solace, though, in the thought that the life of my old comrade and fellow-soldier, John Milton Bryan, has closed as it was designed; that its duties had been well performed; its pleasures enjoyed and its honors won. His day had run its course. There had been the dawn, the morning bright with preparation and hope, the noontide quick with its struggles and its activities, the evening rich with its contentment, and when at last the undimmed sun had sunk in the west, the restful night had come to him and he laid down to sleep in peaceful and pleasant dreams.

"In the silence of the receding world he heard the great waves breaking on a farther shore and felt upon his wasted brow the breath of the eternal morning."

An Indian Ballad.

In her wigwam neat and frail pretty little Yellow Tail sat a-dreaming of her love, and who had gone away to school—brave and stalwart Twisted Nose, son of Ringbone-on-his-Toes, who could whip his weight in bob-cats, who could ride a bucking mule. (Chorus: Oh, the noble Twisted Nose was a terror to his foes till a paleface came and told him that an Indian was a fool, if he was content to fight; he should learn to read and write. So the maiden's stalwart lover left her side and went to school.) Now she hears her lover's wail: "Oh, my darling Yellow Tail, let me take you to my bosom for you are my one best bet! But she shuddered and sighed! "Push yourself off!" she cried, for he wore a crimson necktie and he smoked a cigarette!" "You I loved when bold and rude, but they've made of you a dude, with your turned-up ice-cream trousers and your dinky rah-rah lid!" (Chorus: Oh, the noble Twisted Nose went and pawned his rah-rah clothes and he wears a rusty blanket and a streak of purple paint, and to little Yellow Tail he be married without rail, and be happy ever after in his wigwam, queer and quaint.)—Malt Wason.
